OBJECTIVE

The goal of this class is to inform students of the importance of state and local public budgeting and finance and to provide a generalists’ knowledge of the critical aspects of the subject. At the conclusion of the course, students will understand the important concepts of state and local public finance; be able to identify policy issues presented by subnational taxes; and analyze the politics and economics of financing state and local governments.

REQUIRED TEXT/READINGS/RESOURCES

Brunori, State Tax Policy: A Political Perspective 3rd edition (2011) (Brunori S on syllabus) and Brunori, Local Tax Policy: a Federalist Perspective (2013) (Brunori L on syllabus); supplemental readings will be assigned throughout the term. Students should be familiar with the following resources: State Tax Notes, Journal of State Taxation, Journal of Multistate Taxation and Incentives, and State Tax Today. Access to State Tax Notes and State Tax Today: Taxanalysts.com username DBrunoriTax password: s09gwu

Where appropriate and relevant, you should find the US Census numbers for the particular tax or revenue source being discussed. You can find that information at: http://www.census.gov/govs/

GRADING

The student has the option of either taking a final examination or completing a research paper.

Research paper

I hope you will all consider the option of writing a paper for this class. State and local public finance is a field that has long been neglected by academics and there are ample opportunities to conduct original research. Students write some of the best academic papers in the field. Those students often become instant experts in a particular field of state and local finance. It also helps tremendously in the job hunt. I will assist those students writing exceptional papers in getting their work published. If you choose this option, you will have to clear a topic with me in advance.

If you choose this option, your paper is due on or before May 1.

Take home examination

You may opt for a take-home final examination. The final examination will be distributed on the last day of class. It must be returned to me on or before May 1. The examination will consist of three questions all of which must be answered. You may use any resources in completing your answers but you should not confer with any other students. The exam answers should be typed and no more than five pages in length (per question).
